

Miele

The benefits of an efficient and effective laundry for vets

For most vet practices, laundry is likely to be low on the list of priorities. However, they shouldn't underestimate the benefits of efficient and effective in-house washing and drying appliances.

From a build-up of dirty laundry to expensive engineer call out costs, if the practice's washing machine breaks down it can cause a lot of disruption to the daily workflow. Yet, despite this, almost half of vet practices use domestic washing machines which are not robust enough to manage the day-to-day laundry needs of a busy clinical environment.

Miele Professional washing machines are tested to last for over 30,000 cycles. That's the equivalent of eight cycles a day, seven days a week for over 10 years.

Sustainability is at the core of every part of the manufacturing process here at Miele, from the supply chain through to the packaging. All Miele appliances are optimised to consume only the quantities of energy and water they actually need, while still delivering the best possible results.

“

Having done our sums and weighed up the pros and cons of continuing to outsource our laundry or bring it in-house, the choice was obvious. We now have a far more cost-effective and efficient way of keeping on top of all of our washing and the assurance that we're complying with best practice when it comes to infection control with our laundry processes.

Guy Gordon, Veterinary Surgeon & Director at Donald S McGregor & Partners Veterinary Practice

Click on each tab to discover five good reasons to invest in commercial laundry appliances

Be reassured

Go Pro

On time

Cost effective

Space saving

Commercial washing machines can help ensure the temperatures needed to kill bacteria are maintained during the wash cycle. Miele commercial appliances offer thermal disinfection programmes that contribute to infection control practices.

If you would like advice about your current laundry processes, visit: miele.co.uk/pro/vets or contact us on 0333 222 1419 or email professional.info@miele.co.uk

Miele

The benefits of an efficient and effective laundry for vets

For most vet practices, laundry is likely to be low on the list of priorities. However, they shouldn't underestimate the benefits of efficient and effective in-house washing and drying appliances.

From a build-up of dirty laundry to expensive engineer call out costs, if the practice's washing machine breaks down it can cause a lot of disruption to the daily

workflow. Yet, despite this, almost half of vet practices use domestic washing machines which are not robust enough to manage the day-to-day laundry needs of a busy clinical environment.

Miele Professional washing machines are tested to last for over 30,000 cycles. That's the equivalent of eight cycles a day, seven days a week for over 10 years.

Sustainability is at the core of every part of the manufacturing process here at Miele, from the supply chain through to the packaging. All Miele appliances are optimised to consume only the quantities of energy and water they actually need, while still delivering the best possible results.

“

Having done our sums and weighed up the pros and cons of continuing to outsource our laundry or bring it in-house, the choice was obvious. We now have a far more cost-effective and efficient way of keeping on top of all of our washing and the assurance that we're complying with best practice when it comes to infection control with our laundry processes.

Guy Gordon, Veterinary Surgeon & Director at Donald S McGregor & Partners Veterinary Practice

Click on each tab to discover five good reasons to invest in commercial laundry appliances

Be reassured

Go Pro

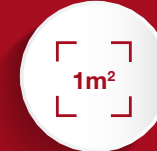

On time

Cost effective

Space saving

Domestic machines struggle to cope in a commercial environment. Frequent, heavy use can lead to costly break downs, not to mention the inconvenience of an out of use machine. Miele's commercial washing machines are built to last and are rigorously tested to withstand the daily laundry needs of a busy vet's practice.

If you would like advice about your current laundry processes, visit: miele.co.uk/pro/vets or contact us on 0333 222 1419 or email professional.info@miele.co.uk

Miele

The benefits of an efficient and effective laundry for vets

For most vet practices, laundry is likely to be low on the list of priorities. However, they shouldn't underestimate the benefits of efficient and effective in-house washing and drying appliances.

From a build-up of dirty laundry to expensive engineer call out costs, if the practice's washing machine breaks down it can cause a lot of disruption to the daily

workflow. Yet, despite this, almost half of vet practices use domestic washing machines which are not robust enough to manage the day-to-day laundry needs of a busy clinical environment.

Miele Professional washing machines are tested to last for over 30,000 cycles. That's the equivalent of eight cycles a day, seven days a week for over 10 years.

Sustainability is at the core of every part of the manufacturing process here at Miele, from the supply chain through to the packaging. All Miele appliances are optimised to consume only the quantities of energy and water they actually need, while still delivering the best possible results.

“

Having done our sums and weighed up the pros and cons of continuing to outsource our laundry or bring it in-house, the choice was obvious. We now have a far more cost-effective and efficient way of keeping on top of all of our washing and the assurance that we're complying with best practice when it comes to infection control with our laundry processes.

Guy Gordon, Veterinary Surgeon & Director at Donald S McGregor & Partners Veterinary Practice

Click on each tab to discover five good reasons to invest in commercial laundry appliances

Be reassured

Go Pro

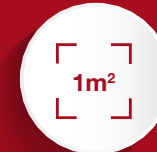

On time

Cost effective

Space saving

An outsourced laundry service might at first seem like the best option but the turn-around time for laundry to be picked up and delivered back can have a big impact on the day-to-day running of the practice. Having a commercial washing machine and dryer on-site allows nurses and other practice assistants to do the laundry as and when required.

If you would like advice about your current laundry processes, visit: miele.co.uk/pro/vets or contact us on 0333 222 1419 or email professional.info@miele.co.uk

Miele

The benefits of an efficient and effective laundry for vets

For most vet practices, laundry is likely to be low on the list of priorities. However, they shouldn't underestimate the benefits of efficient and effective in-house washing and drying appliances.

From a build-up of dirty laundry to expensive engineer call out costs, if the practice's washing machine breaks down it can cause a lot of disruption to the daily

workflow. Yet, despite this, almost half of vet practices use domestic washing machines which are not robust enough to manage the day-to-day laundry needs of a busy clinical environment.

Miele Professional washing machines are tested to last for over 30,000 cycles. That's the equivalent of eight cycles a day, seven days a week for over 10 years.

Sustainability is at the core of every part of the manufacturing process here at Miele, from the supply chain through to the packaging. All Miele appliances are optimised to consume only the quantities of energy and water they actually need, while still delivering the best possible results.

“

Having done our sums and weighed up the pros and cons of continuing to outsource our laundry or bring it in-house, the choice was obvious. We now have a far more cost-effective and efficient way of keeping on top of all of our washing and the assurance that we're complying with best practice when it comes to infection control with our laundry processes.

Guy Gordon, Veterinary Surgeon & Director at Donald S McGregor & Partners Veterinary Practice

Click on each tab to discover five good reasons to invest in commercial laundry appliances

Be reassured

Go Pro

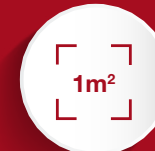

On time

Cost effective

Space saving

Many vet practices may be concerned about the rising costs of outsourced laundry services or frequent engineer call out charges for repairs to their domestic machines. However, they may be surprised to learn that the life-time costs of investing in a commercial model far out-weigh a usually lower cost investment in a domestic model. Commercial appliances are built to last and therefore incur less engineer call out charges, are more energy efficient and price per wash is typically cheaper. Miele machines have a 90% first time fix rate for any repairs.

If you would like advice about your current laundry processes, visit: miele.co.uk/pro/vets or contact us on 0333 222 1419 or email professional.info@miele.co.uk

Miele

The benefits of an efficient and effective laundry for vets

For most vet practices, laundry is likely to be low on the list of priorities. However, they shouldn't underestimate the benefits of efficient and effective in-house washing and drying appliances.

From a build-up of dirty laundry to expensive engineer call out costs, if the practice's washing machine breaks down it can cause a lot of disruption to the daily

workflow. Yet, despite this, almost half of vet practices use domestic washing machines which are not robust enough to manage the day-to-day laundry needs of a busy clinical environment.

Miele Professional washing machines are tested to last for over 30,000 cycles. That's the equivalent of eight cycles a day, seven days a week for over 10 years.

Sustainability is at the core of every part of the manufacturing process here at Miele, from the supply chain through to the packaging. All Miele appliances are optimised to consume only the quantities of energy and water they actually need, while still delivering the best possible results.

“

Having done our sums and weighed up the pros and cons of continuing to outsource our laundry or bring it in-house, the choice was obvious. We now have a far more cost-effective and efficient way of keeping on top of all of our washing and the assurance that we're complying with best practice when it comes to infection control with our laundry processes.

Guy Gordon, Veterinary Surgeon & Director at Donald S McGregor & Partners Veterinary Practice

Click on each tab to discover five good reasons to invest in commercial laundry appliances

Be reassured

Go Pro

On time

Cost effective

Space saving

Finding space for an in-house laundry can be a challenge. However, Miele Professional's Little Giants take up very little room and can be installed as a space-saving washer-dryer stack with a footprint of less than 1m².

If you would like advice about your current laundry processes, visit: miele.co.uk/pro/vets or contact us on 0333 222 1419 or email professional.info@miele.co.uk